Inspiring philanthropy

The Indianapolis
Foundation

“It’s often been said that the truest sense of philanthropy is when one man plants a tree whose shade will benefit someone he will never meet,” said Damar President & CEO Greg Johnson.

The Indianapolis Foundation is one of the first community foundations in the United States and Damar has been fortunate to benefit from the foresight of those individuals who invested in the Indianapolis Foundation in the early part of the last century.

With multiple six-figure gifts to Damar, including a recent $100,000 gift to support the current Exceeding Expectations capital campaign, the Indianapolis Foundation was one of Damar’s first contributors and maintains its presence today as one of Damar’s top donors.

“Gaining support from the Indianapolis Foundation is critical in our fundraising efforts,” shares Greg. “Their giving is not only an important representation of our generous community but also because it plants the seeds for additional contributions to Damar from other members of Indianapolis’ philanthropic community.”
